NRO response to Paragraph 76 Consultation

NRO response to Paragraph 76 Consultation

- Impact of the IGF
  - Various technical bodies, including the NRO, have used the IGF events to reach out and address much of the confusion and misunderstanding that exists in the areas of IP addressing, DNS and root servers.
  - Another positive impact has been the improved involvement of government and other stakeholders in Regional Internet Registry (RIR) policy development process.

NRO response to Paragraph 76 Consultation

- Is continuation desirable?
  - There remain barriers and issues to be addressed if the ideal of multi-stakeholder policy dialogue laid out in the Tunis Agenda is to be achieved.
  - The NRO advocates continued IGF focus on community issues, such as equal access and development, where collaboration by all parties involved is vital to finding a positive way forward.

NRO response to Paragraph 76 Consultation

- Possible improvements
  - The IGF is a valuable resource in assisting participants as they make decisions in their own respective organizations and jurisdictions, but the IGF should have no decision-making role of its own.
  - Further development of on-line discussions and remote participation in face-to-face meetings should also be prioritized as a means of encouraging wider participation.

NRO response to Paragraph 76 Consultation

- Conclusions

- The IGF must continue to stress the need for all stakeholders to work together in ensuring the continued growth, security, and stability of the Internet.
- The Internet's quick growth, and adaptability, is a direct result of its many stakeholders being able to contribute meaningfully to the dynamic processes of Internet policy creation and discussion.
- Multistakeholder engagement with the processes and structures of Internet governance, as facilitated by the IGF, is vital to the ongoing growth and innovation in the Internet community.
